

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Sue FARRAN is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Law at the University of Dundee, Scotland. She was formerly an Associate Professor of Law at the University of the South Pacific based in Vanuatu and continues to be a Visiting Lecturer there. Born in England, she received her legal education in South Africa (in Pietermaritzburg, Natal, and the University of South Africa) and at Cambridge, England, where she completed a BA in English and Social Anthropology in South Africa. She became a legal academic first in South Africa and then worked at the University of the West of England before moving to the South Pacific. The South Pacific region remains the focus of her research. Previous relevant publications include: South Pacific Perspectives of Property Law. London: Cavendish, 2003 (with D. Paterson); 'Conflicts of laws in Human Rights: Consequences for colonies.' Edinburgh Law Review 11: 121-126 (2007); 'Sand, Fish and Sea: A Legal Reflection on Islands – From Orkney to Vanuatu.' International Journal of Coastal and Estuarine Law 21: 389-421 (2006); 'Human Rights in the Pacific Region – Challenges and Solutions.' LAWASIA Journal 39-68 (2005); 'Land Rights and Gender Equality in the Pacific Region.' Australian Property Law Journal 11: 131-140 (2005). Her most recent book is: Human Rights in the South Pacific: Challenges and Changes. London: Routledge-Cavendish (2009).

Ralph GRILLO received a PhD degree in anthropology at the University of Cambridge in 1968. He lectured at Queen's University Belfast (1967-70), and subsequently at the University of Sussex, where he was Dean of the School of African and Asian Studies, and founding Director of the Graduate Research Centre for the Study of Culture, Development and the Environment. He has conducted anthropological field research in East Africa, Ireland, France and Italy. While now retired he remains active in research and writing. While he has written previously on the anthropology of development and the anthropology of language, his principal concern now is with transnational migration and multiculturalism in Europe, and contemporary debates about culture in this context. Some of his more recent books and journal special issues are: (edited, with B. Soares), 'Islam, Transnationalism and the Public Sphere in Western Europe'. Special Issue of Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies 30(5) (2004); (with V. Mazzucato), 'Africa < > Europe: Transnational Linkages, Multi-sited Lives.' Special Issue of Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies 34(2) (2008); (ed.), The Family in Question: Immigrant and Ethnic Minorities in Multicultural Europe. Amsterdam:

Amsterdam University Press (2008); and (edited, with R. Ballard, A. Ferrari, A.J. Hoekema, M. Maussen and P. Shah), Legal Practice and Cultural Diversity. Aldershot: Ashgate (2009).

Thoko KHAIME is a member of the Law, Environment and Development Centre of the School of Law, School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. He has studied law at the Universities of Malawi, Pretoria and Western Cape, and holds the degrees of LL.M from the University of Pretoria, and PhD from the University of London. He conducts research in the fields of international law, human rights, children's rights, and law and natural resources, primarily in Africa. His recent publications are: 'The protection of refugee children under the African human rights system: finding durable solutions in international law.' Pp. 183-197 in Julia Sloth-Nielsen (ed.), Children's Rights in Africa: A Legal Perspective. London: Ashgate (2008); 'Socio-legal approaches to children's rights under the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child: A discussion of methodology.' Pp. 255-274 in Bill Atkin (ed.), The International Survey of Family Law 2009 Edition. Bristol : Family Law (2009). Currently in press is his: The African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child: A socio-legal perspective. Pretoria: Pretoria University Law Press.

Abdulmumuni A. OBA, LL. B., LL. M., B.L., is a Senior Lecturer in the Faculty of Law, University of Ilorin, Ilorin, Nigeria and was Head, Department of Jurisprudence and International Law 1998 – 2002 (E-mail: obailorin@yahoo.com). He has published extensively on the fields of constitutional law, administration of Islamic law and Customary Law in Nigeria, human rights, and Comparative Law which are the major areas of his research interest. His more recent publications include "Rethinking Legal Education in Nigeria" Journal of Commonwealth Law and Legal Education, Vol. 6 No. 1, 2008, 97, "Female Circumcision as Female Genital Mutilation: Human Rights or Cultural Imperialism?" Global Jurists Vol. 8, Iss. 3 (Frontiers) 2008, Article 8, pp. 1 - 38 and "Juju Oaths in Customary Law Arbitration and their Legal Validity in Nigerian Courts" Journal of African Law Vol. 52, No. 1, 2008, 139–158.

Jon UNRUH is a Professor of Geography at McGill University in Montreal. His research, applied, and policy work over the past 20 years has dealt with post-conflict land and property rights in the developing world, and the intersection of land tenure and environmental change. His past endeavors have focused on conflict resolution, land policy and law, restitution, legal pluralism, approaches to reconciling customary and formal tenure systems, and agriculture in postwar and peace-building scenarios. His experience includes work in Liberia, Somalia, Mozambique, East Timor, Sierra Leone, Liberia, Zanzibar, Ethiopia, Uganda, Madagascar, and Colombia. He has a Ph.D. in geography from the University of Arizona, a Masters degree from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and an undergraduate degree from the University of Kansas-Lawrence. Some of his recent publications include: 'Land policy reform, customary rule of law and the peace process in Sierra Leone.' African Journal of Legal Studies 2: 94-117 (2008); 'Carbon sequestration in Africa: the land tenure problem.' Global Environmental Change: Human and Policy Dimensions 18: 700-707 (2008); 'Land tenure and the "evidence landscape" in developing countries.' Annals of the Association of American Geographers 96: 754-772; 'Toward sustainable livelihoods after war: reconstituting rural land tenure systems.' Natural Resources Forum 32: 103-115; (with N.C. Heynen and P. Hossler), 'The political ecology of recovery from armed conflict: the case of landmines in Mozambique.' Political Geography 22: 841-861 (2003).

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Gordon R. WOODMAN is editor-in-chief of the Journal of Legal Pluralism and Emeritus Professor of Comparative Law at Birmingham Law School, University of Birmingham, England. His recent publications include: (ed., with Rubya Mehdi, Hanne Petersen and Erik Sand), Law and Religion in Multicultural Societies, Copenhagen: DJØF Publishing (2008); (ed., with Diethelm Klippel), Risk and the Law. Abingdon: Routledge-Cavendish (2008); 'From Alien Intruder to Nation's Monarch to International Agent: The Changing Roles of the African State in the Realm of Law.' Pp. 187-204 in Reinhard Zimmermann (ed.), Globalisierung und Entstaatlichung des Rechts – Teilband 2: Nichtstaatliches Privatrecht: Geltung und Genese, Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck (2008); 'The Culture Defence in English Common Law: The Potential for Development.' Pp. 7-34 in Marie-Claire Foblets and Alison Dundes Renteln (eds.), Multicultural Jurisprudence: Comparative Perspectives on the Cultural Defense, Oxford and Portland Oregon: Hart Publishing (2009); (with Maarten Bavinck), 'Can There Be Maps Of Law?' Pp. 195-218 in Franz von Benda-Beckmann, Keebet von Benda-Beckmann and Anne Griffiths (eds.), Spatialising Law: An Anthropological Geography of Law in Society, Farnham Britain and Burlington VT: Ashgate (2009); 'The Challenge of African Customary Laws to English Legal Culture.' Chap. 8, pp. 135-150 in Ralph Grillo, Roger Ballard, Alessandro Ferrari, André J. Hoekema, Marcel Maussen and Prakash Shah (eds.), Legal Practice and Cultural Diversity, Aldershot: Ashgate (2009).