

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Giselle CORRADI is a Ph.D. candidate at the Human Rights Centre, Ghent University Law School, Belgium. Her research focuses on the relationship between human rights, legal pluralism and justice sector aid in sub-Saharan Africa, with case studies on Sierra Leone and Mozambique. She has previously published 'Human Rights Promotion in Post Conflict Sierra Leone: Coming to Grips with Plurality in Customary Justice', Journal of Legal Pluralism 60: 73-103 (2010). Contact: Giselle.Corradi@Ugent.be

Sue FARRAN is a Professor of Laws at Northumbria University. She received her legal education in South Africa and at Cambridge and for a number of years was a member of staff of the University of the South Pacific in Vanuatu where she remains an Adjunct Professor. Her research and publications focus on the Pacific region especially in respect of land, human rights and development. She is, among other things, author of Human Rights in the South Pacific: Challenges and Changes (2009) Routledge-Cavendish, London; co-author with D. Paterson of South Pacific Perspectives of Property Law (2004) Cavendish, London, and has recently edited a collection of papers for a special issue of the Pacific Studies journal 'Land and Law', December 2011. She is currently finalising a co-edited collection, with Don Paterson: South Pacific Land Systems, to be published by the University of the South Pacific. Contact: sue.farran@northumbria.ac.uk

Dorota Anna GOZDECKA is a Post-Doctoral Research Fellow at the Centre of Excellence in Foundations of European Law and Polity Research (University of Helsinki) and a Visiting Fellow at the Centre for European Studies (Australian National University). Her post-doctoral research focuses on theoretical aspects of multiculturalism and explores issues of growing religious and cultural pluralism of European societies in the European legal context. She is also a co-director of an international research project 'Post-Lisbon Integration: the Quest for a New European Identity'. The project focuses on constitutionalisation of key policy areas such as citizenship, free movement of persons, freedom, security and justice and fundamental rights in the context of ethnic, linguistic, cultural and religious diversity of Europe. Contact: gozdecka@mappi.helsinki.fi

Anne GRIFFITHS is professor and holds a personal chair in the Anthropology of Law at the School of Law at Edinburgh University. Her research focuses on anthropology of law, comparative and family law, African law, gender, culture and rights and juvenile justice. Her most recent publications include The Power of Law in a Transnational World: Anthropological Enquires (2009); Spatializing

Law: An Anthropological Geography of Law in Society (2009) and Mobile People, Mobile Law: Expanding Legal Relations in a Contracting World (2005) co-edited with F. and K. von Benda-Beckmann. Over the years she has held visiting appointments at various institutions including Senior Research Fellow, International Research Centre on Work and the Human Lifecycle in Global History (IKG), Humboldt University, Berlin (2010-2011), Distinguished Visiting Professor, Faculty of Law, University of Toronto, the Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology, Halle/Saale, Germany, The International Institute for the Sociology of Law Oñati – Gipuzkoa, Spain. The University of Texas at Austin, School of Law and the Southern and Eastern African Regional Centre for Women's Law at the University of Zimbabwe. She is currently a member of the Executive Body of the Commission on Pluralism, a branch of the International Union of Anthropological and Ethnological Sciences, of which she was President from 2003-2009. Her current research, funded by the Leverhulme (2009-2010) is on the Gendered Dynamics of Land Tenure in Southern Africa. Contact Anne.Griffiths@ed.ac.uk.

Irene I. HADIPRAYITNO is a Researcher on Human Rights and the Right to Food in the Law and Governance Group, Wageningen University, Netherlands. She received her PhD in Human Rights and Development from the Faculty of Law, Utrecht University. She has published widely on topics related to the right to development, the right to food and food security and on social practices of negotiating human rights in the context of agricultural modernisation.

Amy R. JACKSON became interested in legal pluralism in the final year of her LLB degree at the University of Reading after spending a year on the ERASMUS year abroad program at Uppsala University, Sweden. The focus of the topic of her LLM dissertation at the University of Sussex was global legal pluralism. The title of her doctoral thesis, fully-funded by a studentship from the University of Reading and submitted in October 2011, is: What is law? Unveiling a Subjective Legal Pluralism. This research includes a qualitative empirical study to assess whether women living in Britain experience and construct the practice of veiling (such as wearing a hijab or niqab) as law. The influence of her research on black-letter law and religion lawyers became apparent when she was asked to chair the first panel on legal pluralism at the Law and Religion Scholars Network (LARSN) conference in May 2011. Contact: A.R.Jackson@pgr.reading.ac.uk

Svein JENTOFT is a sociologist and a professor at the Norwegian College of Fishery Science at the University of Tromsø, Norway. He has worked extensively on fisheries and coastal issues, including resource management and industrial organization in his native Norway as well as in other countries. Jentoft has published several books on the resource rights and livelihoods of indigenous peoples in Norway and in Nicaragua. His most recent book in English is Poverty Mosaics. Realities and Prospects in Small-Scale Fisheries (co-edited with Arne Eide), Springer (2011). His latest work also includes the governance of marine protected areas in Nicaragua and Spain. He is a co-editor and contributor to Governability: Theory and Applications in Fisheries, Springer, forthcoming. Contact: svein.jentoft@uit.no

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Courtenay E. PARLEE is a doctoral candidate in Interdisciplinary Studies at the University of New Brunswick. She completed her Master's thesis on the clam industry while participating in the research undertaken through the Coastal Community University Research Alliance (Coastal CURA). Her work examined the consequences of the lack of effective dispute resolution in coastal and ocean management in Canada. She has presented papers at several national and international conferences, and is currently undertaking training in mediation and conflict resolution. Contact: courtenaye.parlee@gmail.com.

Oliver C RUPPEL is a Professor of Law, in the Departments both of Mercantile and of Public Law, Faculty of Law, University of Stellenbosch (South Africa). He lectures at various academic institutions worldwide as a Visiting Professor and currently serves as Coordinating Lead Author for Africa in the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, Working Group II, housed at Stanford University. He was until 2010 one of 14 worldwide Founding WTO Chair holders. He held that Chair at the Faculty of Law, University of Namibia, Windhoek, where he also served as the Director of the National Human Rights and Documentation Centre. Contact: ruppel@sun.ac.za

Katharina RUPPEL-SCHLICHTING is a Senior Legal Researcher and the Director of the Windhoek based Legal Research and Development Trust of Namibia. A qualified lawyer and international legal consultant, she specialises in Public International Law, concentrating on International Environmental Law and Intellectual Property Rights. Contact: katharina.ruppel@googlemail.com.

Melanie G. WIBER is Professor of Anthropology at the University of New Brunswick. She is the author of Politics, Property and Law in the Philippine Uplands (1993 Wilfrid Laurier University Press), and is co-editor with Franz and Keebet von Benda-Beckmann of The Changing Properties of Property (2006 Berghan). For the past twenty-five years she has conducted research on natural resource management, including research on irrigation, farming and fisheries. She has served for many years on the Executive Body of the Commission on Legal Pluralism and is currently Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of Legal Pluralism.

Contact: wiber@unb.ca.