

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Birgit BRÄUCHLER is an assistant professor at the Institute for Ethnology, Goethe-University, Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany, and also works with the Asia Research Institute at the National University of Singapore. She is editor of: Reconciling Indonesia: Grassroots Agency for Peace. Abingdon UK and New York: Routledge, 2009; co-editor with John Postill of Theorising Media and Practice. Oxford and New York: Berghahn Books, 2010; and co-editor with Thomas Widlok of Die Revitalisierung von Tradition / The Revitalisation of Tradition, Zeitschrift für Ethnologie Special Issue 132, 2007. She is the author of articles and book chapters on the globalisation of local conflicts, the revival of tradition, cyberanthropology, and religion and the internet. The focus of her current research is the cultural dimension of reconciliation in Indonesia.

Heather DOUGLAS is an Associate Professor in the TC Beirne School of Law, The University of Queensland, Australia. From 2001-2007 she was a part-time commissioner with the Queensland Law Reform Commission, and in 2004 she was a visiting scholar at the Centre for Socio-Legal Studies, Oxford University. She teaches and researches in the criminal justice field. For the past two years she has been looking at the regulation of the drug khat in Australia. She is particularly interested in the relationship between indigenous people and the criminal law. Work she has published related to these fields include: (with Merali Pedder) 'Legal Regulation of the Drug Khat in Australia' 18 Journal of Law and Medicine 18: 284-301 (2010); (with Jennifer Corrin) 'A Tragedy of Monumental Proportions': Indigenous Australians and the Sentencing Process' (2010) Social and Legal Studies 19(2): 197-216 (2010); and (with John Chesterman) 'Law on Australia's Northern Frontier: The Fall and Rise of Race' 24 (1) Canadian Journal of Law and Society 24(1): 69-83 (2009). She was awarded the degree of PhD in 2006 for a thesis exploring the work of Justice Martin Kriewaldt, the sole judge of the Northern Territory Supreme Court of Australia during the 1950s.

Ida HARBOE KNUDSEN, who was born in Ålborg, Denmark, 1977, is a Research Fellow at the Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology in Halle/Saale, Germany, and an associate researcher at the Vytautas Magnas University, Kaunas, Lithuania. She studied Ethnography and Social Anthropology at Århus University, Denmark, from 1999 to 2006. From 2006-2010 she was a doctoral student in the Project Group Legal Pluralism at the Max Planck Institute, Halle/Saale, financed by the EU sponsored programme, Marie Curie SocAnth, and was awarded the PhD for a dissertation on the effects of legal changes in the Lithuanian countryside after the country's entry into the EU. Her research interests continue to be around the themes of legal change, post-socialism, the EU and its new member states, and social security. She has published: 'Trade and Exchange among Farmers in a Post-Soviet Lithuanian Village.' Pp. 10-29 in Defining Region: Socio-Cultural Anthropology and Interdisciplinary Perspectives, Klaipeda University (2006); 'Who represents who? - a critical approach to Lithuanian identity discourse.' Pp. 59-68 in Identity Politics, Histories, Regions and Borderlands, in Acta Historica XIX, Studia Antropologica III, Klaipeda University (2009); and is about to publish: 'Keletas pasvarstymų apie žmogaus amžių, politiką ir politikus kaimo bendruomenėje, Lietuvai įstojus į ES [Some Reflections About Age, Politics and Rural Politicians after Lithuania's entry into the EU].' In Lietuvos Etnologija (forthcoming).

Abdi HERSI holds a Master's degree in International Studies from the University of Queensland, Australia, and is currently a PhD candidate at Griffith University, Australia, working on the topic 'Understanding the meanings of integration: Perspectives of Muslims, members of the wider public and the state'. His research interests include immigrant incorporation in general and in particular the integration of Muslim immigrants and refugees from Sub-Saharan Africa. He has worked for the Australian Commonwealth Department of Immigration and Citizenship, where he has observed settlement services and processes that refugees and immigrants go through in their adjustment to host societies. Before migrating to Australia, he worked for the International Organisation for Migration and the Australian High Commission in Kenya, assisting in pre-departure cultural orientation programmes for immigrants and refugees bound for Australia, the United States and Canada. In Australia, he has worked on research projects that studied the new and emerging African communities in Australia. He is currently a member of the Advisory Board of Queensland African Communities Council, Inc.

Rikardo SIMARMATA is working as a Ph.D researcher at Van Vollenhoven Institute for Law, Governance and Development, Leiden University, the Netherlands. He holds a first degree in law. He spent eight years as an NGO activist working for issues on land and indigenous peoples rights. His doctoral work is focused on law making and legal implementation of resource tenure rights. He has published numerous articles and books over the past ten years concerning forest tenure and indigenous peoples. His recent publication is The Struggle for Truth and Justice A Survey of Transitional Justice Initiatives Throughout Indonesia, New York: International Center for Transitional Justice (2004), and (in Bahasa Indonesia) Legal Recognition of Indigenous Peoples in Indonesia, Jakarta:

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

---

Regional Initiative on Indigenous Peoples' Rights and Development-UNDP (2006). He can be contacted at simarmatar@cbn.net.id or r.simarmata@law.leidenuniv.nl.

Kaius TUORI (born 1974) is Senior Researcher at the Center of Excellence in Global Governance Research, Faculty of Law, University of Helsinki, Finland. He holds a doctorate in legal history and a MA in history, both from Helsinki, and has research interests in legal history, legal anthropology and archaeology. His publications include Ancient Roman Lawyers and Modern Legal Ideals (2007) and numerous articles.