

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Franz von BENDA-BECKMANN is an Associate Editor of the Journal of Legal Pluralism and was one of the guest editors of the Special Issue of the Journal, Dynamics of Plural Legal Orders, nrs. 53/54 (2006), where more of his biographical details may be found.

Thomas BIERSCHENK is Professor of Cultures and Societies of Africa and Head of the Department of Anthropology and African Studies at Johannes Gutenberg University, Mainz, Germany. His interests are in political anthropology in Africa and the Arabian peninsula, politics and the state in modern Africa, anthropology and sociology of development, and Islam in Africa. His publications include: Weltmarkt, Stammesgesellschaft und Staatsformation in Sudostarabien (Sultanat Oman) [The World Market, Tribal Society and State Formation in Southeastern Arabia (Oman Sultanate)]. Saarbrücken, Fort Lauderdale: Breitenbach (1984); Negotiated Development. Edison: Transaction Publishers (1999); (edited with Jean-Pierre Chauveau and Jean-Pierre Olivier de Sardan), Courtiers en développement. Les villages africains en quête de projets. Paris : Karthala (2000) ; (with Jean-Pierre-Olivier de Sardan), 'Powers in the Village: Rural Benin between Democratisation and Decentralisation.' Africa 73: 145-173 2003); (with Pierre-Yves Le Mur and Anne Floquet), 'L'État est-il soluble dans la Société Civile? Le Bénin Rural avant la Décentralisation.' Bulletin de l'A.P.A.D 16 (2006).

Katherine DOOLIN holds a law degree from the University of Waikato, New Zealand and is a Barrister and Solicitor of the High Court of New Zealand. She gained a PhD from the University of Kent, England, for a thesis which examined tensions within the concept of restorative justice and analysed the use of restorative justice as a response to youth offending in England and Wales and New Zealand. She has taught at the Universities of Waikato and Kent, and is now a lecturer at Birmingham Law School, University of Birmingham. She is currently conducting research into the use of restorative justice in the criminal justice process in Belgium as part of a wider comparative study of restorative justice in common law and civil law systems. Her recent publications include: 'But What Does It Mean? Seeking Definitional Clarity in Restorative Justice.' 71 Journal of Criminal Law 71: 427-440 (2007); and 'Translating Restorative Justice Into Practice: Lessons From New Zealand's Family Group Conferencing Approach To Youth Offending.' International Journal of Restorative Justice 4: 1-24 (2008).

Fauzia SHARIFF is Lecturer in Law and Anthropology at the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE). She completed her PhD from the University of Warwick in 2006 and was awarded an ESRC Postdoctoral Research Fellowship at the School of Oriental and African Studies, London in 2007-8. Outside her academic studies she has worked on social justice and development issues within UK government departments, helping to establish a Legal and Research Unit for the Immigration judiciary in 1997 and setting up a dedicated forced marriage desk at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in 2000. She has also worked as Governance Adviser for the UK's Department of International Development and carried out research work for local government and NGOs on social inclusion in the UK. She has commissioned, edited and contributed to many government papers, most recently: Y. Samad, and J. Eade 'Community Perceptions of Forced Marriage' FCO 2003 and M. Samson et al. 'Designing and Implementing Social Transfer Programmes', Cape Town: EPRI Press, 2006. She has presented papers internationally and gave the 2003 Ashin Dasgupta Memorial Lecture at the Anthropological Survey of India in Kolkata, India.

Ganesh SHIVAKOTI, a native of Nepal, has for the last 10 years been Professor of Agricultural and Natural Resource Economics at the School of Environment, Resources and Development of the Asian Institute of Technology (AIT) in Bangkok, Thailand. Prior to joining AIT, he was on the faculty at the Institute of Agriculture, Tribhuvan University, Nepal. He has published more than 60 journal articles, and edited several books and proceedings including: (with Elinor Ostrom) Improving Irrigation, Governance and Management in Nepal, Oakland California: ICS Press (2001); (with Douglas Vermillion, Wai-Fung Lam, Elinor Ostrom, Ujjwal Pradhan and Robert Yoder) Asian Irrigation in Transition: Responding to Challenges. London: Sage Publications (2005); and (with Edward L. Webb) Decentralization, Forests and Rural Communities: Policy Outcomes in Southeast Asia. Los Angeles: Sage Publications (2008). His areas of professional interest include farming system economics, common property resources, institutions and policies of water, land and forestry, and population and environment relationships. He has been advisor to more than 20 doctoral and 100 masters students from Bangladesh, Bhutan, Cambodia, China, Indonesia, Lao, Nepal, Pakistan, Philippines, Thailand and Vietnam on these issues.

Levent TEZCAN studied Politics and Administration at the University of Ankara and Social Sciences at the University of Bremen before gaining his doctorate in the Faculty of Sociology at the University of Bielefeld, where since 1995 he has been a Research Assistant at the Institute for Interdisciplinary Research on Conflict and Violence. His current research interests are modernization processes in Turkey, sociology of Islam, Islam in Europe. His recent publications include: 'Inszenierungen kollektiver Identität, Artikulationen des politischen Islam - beobachtet auf den Massenversammlungen der türkisch-islamistischen Gruppe Milli Görüs [Stagings of Collective Identity: Articulations of Political Islam Observed at Mass Meetings of the Turkish Islamist Group Milli Görüs].' Soziale Welt 53: 303-324 (2002); 'Das Islamische in den Studien zu Muslimen in Deutschland [The Islamic in Studies of Muslims in Germany].' Zeitschrift für Soziologie: 32 (2003).

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Aimar VENTSEL was born in Estonia. He received his PhD degree at the Martin Luther University, Halle/Saale, Germany. Between 2000 and 2003 he was a doctoral student at the Max-Planck-Institute for Social Anthropology in Halle, studying property relations in post-socialist Siberia. Since 2003 he has been working at the Estonian Literary Museum in Tartu, Estonia as a senior researcher. His current research interests are in property and legal issues related to music and subcultures. In addition to the economy and ideology of the German punkrock and skinhead subcultures he studies property issues in Siberian pop music. His publications include: 'Stars without money: Sakha ethnic music business, upward mobility and friendship.' Sibirica 4: 88-103 (2004); Reindeer, Rodina and Reciprocity: Kinship and Property Relations in a Siberian Village, Halle Studies in the Anthropology of Eurasia, Vol. 7. Berlin: LIT Verlag. (2005); 'Sakha pop music - a celebration of consuming.' The Anthropology of East Europe Review 24: 68-86 (2006); 2007, 'Pride, honour, individual and collective violence: order in a "lawless" village.' Pp. 34-53 in Fernanda Pirie and Keebet von Benda-Beckman (eds.), Order and Disorder: Anthropological Perspectives. Oxford, New York: Berghahn (2007).

YONARIZA is a senior researcher at the Center for Irrigation, Land and Water Resources and Development Studies of Andalas University, Padang-Indonesia. He is also a faculty member at the Department of Agricultural Socioeconomics and at the Graduate Program in Integrated Natural Resources Management of the same university. He holds a Ph.D from the Asian Institute of Technology (AIT) Thailand in the field of Natural Resources Management. His research interests include land and resources tenure, legal pluralism, commons resource management (i.e. forest and irrigation), and agro forestry, as well policy analysis in those sectors. He also has a strong interest in Southeast Asian Studies having collaborated with colleagues from Thailand and Philippines in a research project on Southeast Asia Land and Resources Tenure in Transition in 1999-2001. He has published papers in international journals, in the form of book chapters, and in international conferences. He is currently a visiting researcher at the Institute of Asian Studies, Chulalongkorn University Thailand under the Nippon Foundation Asian Public Intellectual Fellowship program, carrying on a research project on the effect of a logging ban on natural forest in timber tree domestication in Thailand.